Letter From the Founder

May 30, 1997

Dear Friends:

Welcome to the second biennial national Asian Women's Health Conference, "The Quality of Our Lives: Empowering Asian American Women for the 21st Century"!

We at NAWHO have formulated and developed this event with the vision of providing a positive and inspiring environment where Asian women and girls can work together to solve the many complex problems affecting our health and well-being. We believe that the conference will prove to be a momentous and powerful time for all of us here today, from our legislative representatives to health care providers, and from community organizers to those who have never had the opportunity to organize in support of their own needs and concerns. A powerful time, in that each of us will find a new hope, a new motivation to stand up and take action to advocate for the vulnerable in our communities.

In these urgent times—where immigrants are under attack, where discrimination continues to run rampant, where our right to fundamental freedoms is being challenged—it is up to us to take control of our lives, and shape the future of our communities. We hope that in this exciting weekend of information-sharing, training, and discussion, you will be able connect with other advocates from your area; that you may go back to your communities with the vital support and resources necessary to create change and be the pro-active Asian women's health movement.

Thank you for joining us in Los Angeles, and for continuing to support the critical work of NAWHO. Please enjoy the conference!

Letter From the Board of Directors

May 30, 1997

Dear NAWHO Friends:

On behalf of the Board of Directors of the National Asian Women's Health Organization (NAWHO), it is my pleasure to welcome all of you to "The Quality of Our Lives: Empowering Asian American Women for the 21st Century", the second biennial national Asian women's health conference.

For the past three years, NAWHO has been an important and effective advocate for Asian women's health issues, bringing the needs and concerns of Asian women to the public policy table. On November 17-19, 1995, NAWHO sponsored the first national Asian women's health conference in San Francisco, which was attended by over 500 participants. During that time, we came together to define a new Asian women's health care agenda that would finally incorporate the full range of issues affecting of the lives of our diverse Asian American population.

At this conference, we invite participants to share their experiences and knowledge with one another, and continue the process of developing an inclusive, cohesive, and long-lasting national Asian women's health movement. Across ethnicities, class, professional and generational lines let us spend the next two days extending a process we have already begun—creating a political presence and voice for Asian American women that will define our presence in America into the next millennium.

Thank you for your participation, and we look forward to working together to improve the overall quality of our lives, and empower ourselves to be a strong political and social force in the 21st century.

WASHINGTON

March 25, 1997

Warm greetings to everyone gathered in Los Angeles for the second national health conference of the National Asian Women's Health Organization.

I applaud the dedication of the legislators, health care providers, business professionals, medical researchers, and many other concerned individuals who have come together at this conference to address the health needs of Asian American women. You can take pride in your efforts to promote health programs and support services that are both practical and visionary. By striving to ensure the health of Asian American women, you are reaffirming our profound commitment to America's promise of opportunity and equality for all.

Your conference's theme, "The Quality of Our Lives: Empowering Asian American Women for the 21st Century," reminds us that we must rededicate ourselves to building on the strength of our nation's great diversity. My Administration shares your commitment to creating a world that allows everyone the freedom to reach his or her own potential, and I commend you for your work to empower Asian American women with the knowledge, leadership skills, and confidence to succeed in our multicultural society.

Best wishes for a successful conference.

TO: NATIONAL ASIAN WOMEN'S HEALTH ORGANIZATION

I am delighted to extend my warm regards and welcome to everyone who has gathered in Los Angeles for your second national health conference.

California depends on organizations such as yours in ensuring that all our citizens are equipped, trained and prepared to meet the challenges of tomorrow, and I applaud your commitment to make a positive difference in the lives of Asian American women and girls.

The next three days promise to be very beneficial as legislators, health care providers, medical researchers, business professionals and many others are on hand to address the timely issue of greater civic participation and leadership development on Asian women's health issues.

May this gathering provide a wonderful opportunity not only to exchange ideas related to this year's theme, "The Quality of Our Lives: Empowering Asian American Women for the 21st Century," and chart the course that you will follow in the future, but to take stock in your organization's enormous success so far.

Please accept my best wishes for an enjoyable and productive meeting and every future success.

Sincerely,

TO THE NATIONAL ASIAN WOMEN'S HEALTH ORGANIZATION
on the occasion of the Second National Health conference in Los Angeles, May 29-31, 1997

I am pleased to have this opportunity to extend to you my warmest Aloha and greeting on the occasion of the second National Health Conference sponsored by the National Asian Women's Health Organization.

The health status of Asian women and girls in America is an important issue and it is most gratifying that your organization is involved in gathering information and promoting research in this field. In much of the data and research reports that are disseminated nationally there is seldom reference to the Asian community, let alone the women and girls that comprise a significant part of it.

Language, culture and family traditions oftentimes are barriers to regular health care services for Asian families, particularly the aging members. And even if they are frequent users of health care, their presence is not usually noted or recorded and no statistical information is derived. This lack of data for Asian women and girls means that their needs go unrecorded and for the most part they are not included in national trends in disease and recovery rates.

This travesty in meeting the health care needs of Asian women and girls is being addressed by this significant gathering of researchers and experts. I am confident that the outcomes will greatly enhance our health care and help to fill the gaps in information and data. I extend my best wishes to the presenters and to their audience and look forward to reading the report of this important gathering.

Greetings from Congresswoman Nancy Pelosi

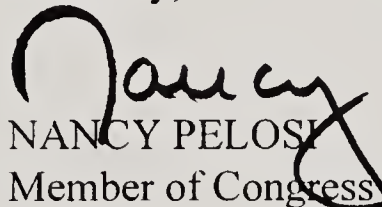

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the second national health conference of the National Asian Women's Health Organization (NAWHO).

I commend NAWHO for its efforts on behalf of Asian women and girls. I am impressed that NAWHO has taken a leadership role in developing strategies to empower Asian women and girls to actively participate in creating a dynamic and inclusive health movement for all women.

I encourage you to continue your efforts to educate all communities of interest about the health care needs and issues of Asian women and girls. Continue to build upon NAWHO's fine work in developing a network of support in your own communities.

Please accept my personal best wishes for a successful event, and continued success in the future.

Dear Ms. Chung:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend you and the National Asian Women's Health Organization (NAWHO) for your tremendous efforts in organizing your second annual national health conference. This year's theme, "The Quality of Our Lives: Empowering Asian American Women for the 21st Century," is most appropriate in light of the many challenges facing Asian women in our society.

The goals of this year's conference are truly comprehensive and extremely important. They highlight the need for Asian American women leadership in all sectors of our society. Promoting empowerment through networking, education, and mentoring will increase the effectiveness of Asian American women in advocating for positive change in our nation's healthcare system.

Improving the quality of healthcare in this country is an important issue for all. Your conference will help to increase the awareness of health issues which specifically affect Asian women. It will also enhance the civic participation of the growing community of Asian women in the United States.

I am confident that your conference will be a wonderful success. I look forward to working with you in the future. Together, we can make a difference.

Dear Friends,

It is with admiration and respect that I offer my sincere congratulations to the National Asian Women's Health Organization in holding its second national health conference.

I commend your organization for bringing to the forefront these important health issues and concerns. Suicide, substance abuse, breast cancer and other social maladies can only be properly addressed through inclusive commitment and strategic planning. Creating a platform for discussion, advocacy and developing policy by promoting and encouraging Asian-American leadership and civic participation are productive and effective conference goals. The wellness of our communities is a multi-shared responsibility. I thank you for your pro-active stance and progressive agenda in focusing on these issues at your conference.

With this in mind, it is with great pleasure, that I lend my support to the National Asian Women's Health Organization and its effort of providing health services, mentoring and leadership to Asian women and girls.

Welcome to the attendees of the second National Asian Women's Health Organization Conference. The major focus of this conference is to increase civic participation and leadership development of Asian women's health issues.

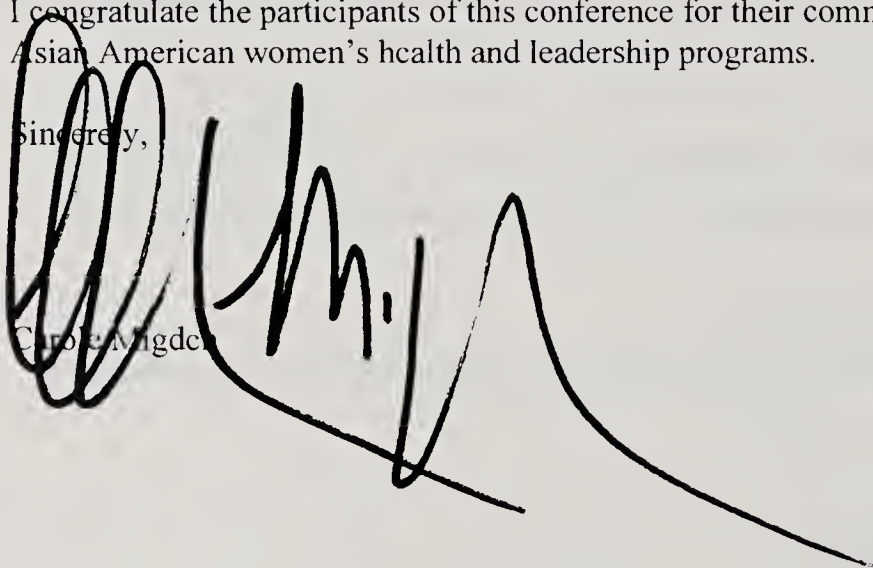

We enter the 21st Century with the knowledge that more women hold leadership positions in California than ever before in history. However, this representation is far from adequate in reflecting the number of women who populate our state. I enthusiastically support the increased involvement of Asian American women in government, health and community organizations to create a pro-active health movement.

Many of my constituents belong to the Asian American community. Therefore, I am well aware of the need for greater visibility and public policy regarding Asian American women's health issues. The success of this conference in bringing together the many professionals involved in promoting Asian women's health and leadership roles stands as a tribute to cooperation and community involvement.

I congratulate the participants of this conference for their commitment to the advancement of Asian American women's health and leadership programs.

Sincerely,

Carole Migden

Dear Participants, Activists and NAWHO staff:

Congratulations for convening the Second Biennial Conference of the National Asian Women's Health Organization. Please accept my best wishes for a productive and interesting experience.

I want to commend you all for your dedication and determination to make an impact on Asian women's health. Specifically, the focus on leadership development and civic participation embodied by the theme of "The Quality of Our Lives: Empowering Asian American Women for the 21st Century" is timely in an era of devolving government services and the dismantling of the safety net. As only one of two Asian Americans in the California State Legislature, I can personally attest to the need for more Asian American elected representatives in all levels of government.

I hope that you will use the skills acquired at this conference to actively make a difference in the lives of Asian American women in your home communities. Your participation in this conference is the beginning of a legacy of leadership and activism that will define health policy well into the next century.

Dear Participants:

I am delighted to extend warm and cordial greetings to the coordinators and participants of the National Asian Women's Health Organization (NAWHO) second national health conference.

This year's conference theme, "The Quality of Our Lives: Empowering Asian American Women for the 21st Century", conveys the focus of the conference and NAWHO's commitment to increasing civic participation and leadership development on Asian women's health issues. Your efforts to improve the quality of life for all Asian American women are truly worthy of praise and recognition.

Please accept my best wishes for a successful conference and for continued success in the days and years ahead.

National Asian Women's Health Organization

NAWHO'S MISSION AND HISTORY

The National Asian Women's Health Organization (NAWHO) is a non-profit, community-based health advocacy organization, committed to improving the overall health status of Asian women and girls.

NAWHO develops and implements a broad agenda for Asian women's health, addressing the numerous factors that impact the physical, emotional, mental, social, and spiritual well-being of Asian women and girls. The foundation of NAWHO's programs is the belief that the needs and concerns of Asian women and girls are specific and diverse, and that they must be addressed within community, cultural, and linguistic contexts.

NAWHO was incorporated in September 1993 and received 501(c)3 standing as a non-profit

"The movement addresses the inequities in access to economic, social, educational, leadership, and other life advancement opportunities for Asian women" organization in February 1994. NAWHO was founded in response to the absence of comprehensive and pro-active research and services addressing the health issues of Asian women and girls, as well as the lack of programs promoting equality for and the self-empowerment of Asian women and girls. By fostering information and resource sharing among Asian women, as well as by promoting a rigorous exploration of the issues affecting them, NAWHO has begun the process of mobilizing an Asian women's health movement. The movement simultaneously addresses the inequities in access to economic, social, educational, leadership, and other life advancement opportunities for Asian women, in order to achieve social justice and universal access to health and social services.

MAJOR ACCOMPLISHMENTS

NAWHO has accomplished many "firsts" in its three-year history, implementing ground-breaking programs that initiate powerful organizing efforts at the grassroots level involving Asian women and girls from different ethnic communities and across class lines; projects that assess the health status of the diverse Asian women's community, and create an advocacy and public policy framework that reflects commonalities and differences within the Asian community. Some of NAWHO's major accomplishments include:

■ South Asian Women's Health Project

This Project was an advocacy and public education effort to raise awareness around the health needs of the South Asian women's community, which historically has been marginalized within the Asian American community. This was the first project in the country to focus exclusively on the health issues concerning immigrant South Asian women. Over 150 South Asian women, a majority of whom did not have health insurance, participated in the health assessment that culminated in the first South Asian Women's Health Day. NAWHO has published a report, Emerging Communities, which provides policy and community recommendations on addressing the needs of this underserved population.

■ Asian Women's Reproductive and Sexual Health Empowerment Project

In 1995, NAWHO began this project with a health needs assessment of the factors influencing the use of reproductive and sexual health services by Asian American women. Interviews and focus groups with Asian women of different ethnic, immigration, ages, and socioeconomic backgrounds revealed that under-estimation of risk, silence and shame, relationship dynamics, and lack of access to information were crucial factors. In 1996, NAWHO conducted a statewide survey on the use of, knowledge of, and attitudes towards reproductive health technologies by Asian American women in California. NAWHO recently released the results of this unprecedented research, which revealed much about the health status of Asian American women, and the inaccessibility of reproductive health services and education.

■ American Women's Breast and Cervical Cancer Project

In the first year of this project, NAWHO conducted regional cultural competency trainings for health care providers on the need to increase outreach and early detection services to immigrant Asian women. NAWHO has also collected linguistically and culturally appropriate resources and information, and has served as a clearinghouse for Asian women with breast cancer, and individuals and organizations interested in breast cancer among Asian women. NAWHO convened the first National Asian American Breast Cancer Policy Summit, which brought together Asian community advocates and representatives from government health programs to create a plan of action that will involve Asian American women in all levels of the fight against breast cancer.

■ "Coming Together, Moving Strong: Mobilizing an Asian Women's Health Movement"

In 1995, NAWHO organized the first national Asian women's health conference, which brought together over 530 participants to discuss the critical health issues affecting Asian American women and girls. With the assistance of the California Wellness Foundation, NAWHO was able to grant 100 scholarships to low-income Asian women. The conference focused on issues that are often brushed aside in the greater Asian American community, such as domestic violence, young women's sexual health, breast cancer, and menopause.

■ U.S. Women of Color Delegation

NAWHO was a leading member of the U.S. Women of Color Delegation to the 4th World Conference on Women in Beijing, China. This 20 member Delegation also participated in the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) in Cairo, Egypt. The Delegation includes representation from African, Latina, Native, and Asian American communities. As a result of the Delegation's advocacy efforts, the needs and concerns of U.S. women of color are being incorporated into U.S. government positions on global issues.

CURRENT PROGRAM PRIORITIES

NAWHO continues its commitment to increasing the participation of Asian women in health promotion activities, as well as broadening the scope of health care and services in this country to be more inclusive of the needs of Asian women and girls. These are the current program priorities for NAWHO in 1997:

■ Southeast Asian Women's Reproductive Health Project

This project aims to increase knowledge and awareness of reproductive health issues among low-income, recent immigrant and refugee Vietnamese women. NAWHO began this project by conducting focus groups of Vietnamese women and men to assess their health knowledge, concerns, problems, and interests. NAWHO has provided skills building training sessions to one of the most vulnerable ethnic groups within the Asian population to gain a greater understanding of the health care system in the United States, as well as to facilitate their access to opportunities, resources, and activities that improve quality of life, such as English classes and employment training, which consequently affect and improve Asian women's health. This project will culminate in a self-empowerment health curriculum for Vietnamese women, which will serve as a model to be replicated in other areas with large concentrations of Southeast Asian populations.

■ Asian American Women's Breast and Cervical Cancer Project

This year NAWHO is expanding the Asian American Women's Breast and Cervical Cancer Project by conducting trainings outside of California. NAWHO has completed the National Action Plan on Asian Women and Breast Cancer and will be developing implementation strategies with community members, providers, and breast cancer advocates throughout the country.

■ Asian Women's Reproductive and Sexual Health Empowerment Project

In 1997, NAWHO plans to continue to work towards our public education and advocacy goals. Project activities will increase public awareness through media and special outreach events. In addition, NAWHO will partner with health care providers, using our survey key findings to better meet the reproductive health needs of Asian American women, through educational forums and dissemination of the project report. NAWHO will be working closely with the state of California on their new $60 million State-Only Family Planning Program, which is under the joint administration of the Office of Family Planning and Medi-Cal. NAWHO was recently awarded a sub-contract to provide technical assistance for the project, to work with medical providers to expand access to comprehensive, high-quality family planning services for low-income individuals in California.

Speaker Bios

Wilma Chan

The Honorable Wilma Chan was elected to the Alameda County Board of Supervisors in 1994. She is the current chair of the Legislative Committee and member of the Health Committee. Prior to her tenure with Alameda County, Ms. Chan served on the Oakland Board of Education and as its president from 1991 to 1993. The daughter of Chinese immigrants, she has been a strong advocate for youth and families-serving as program coordinator for Effective Parenting Information for Children, and working with the district's early childhood program.

Sophia Chang, MD, MPH

Dr. Chang is the Director of the HIV/AIDS Program at the Kaiser Family Foundation. Previously, she was assistant professor in the Division of Internal Medicine at the University of California, San Francisco. Prior to joining the faculty at UCSF, she was responsible for the administration health services for persons with HIV/AIDS for the San Francisco Department of Public Health. While devoting much of her profession to providing direct patient care and teaching, Dr. Chang also conducts breast cancer research at the Medical Effectiveness Research Center for Diverse Populations. Her research focuses on breast cancer screening and the evaluation of breast abnormalities, with an emphasis on differences across racial and ethnic groups.

Deborah F. Ching, MPA

Deborah F. Ching, MPA is the executive director of the Chinatown Service Center, a non-profit community-based organization operating a range of services including a licensed community health clinic, employment, social adjustment, family and youth counseling services to immigrant and refugee communities in the greater Los Angeles area. The Center provides these services to more than 14,000 persons annually. Ms. Ching has received many awards, including the 1997 Woman of the Year for the 45th Assembly District, selected by Majority Leader Antonio Villaraigosa, and the 1995 Outstanding Community Service Award for the Chinatown Public Safety Association.

Marcia Choo

Marcia Choo serves as the executive director for the Asian Pacific American Dispute Resolution Center of Los Angeles, where she has led the organization to the forefront of intercultural mediation. Ms. Choo helped mediate between the City of Compton and the Samoan community following the shooting deaths of two Samoan brothers by a Compton police officer in 1991, and in the ongoing dialogue between the African American and Korean American communities. Ms. Choo also teaches a course on race relations and community conflict resolution at California State University, Dominguez Hills.

Henry Chung, MD

Henry Chung, MD, is the medical director for the Chinatown Health Clinic in New York, where he directs and coordinates all clinical, health education and quality assurance activities in an ambulatory primary care facility providing more than 60,000 annual visits. He also maintains a part-time private practice in psychopharmacology and general psychiatry and also is a clinical assistant professor at New York University Medical Center. As a top researcher in the psychiatry field, he has published several articles and papers regarding health care reform, cultural issues in treatment programs and medical training and substance abuse. Dr. Chung also serves on the board of directors for the National Asian Women's Health Organization.

Mary Chung

Mary Chung is the founder of the National Asian Women's Health Organization (NAWHO). She was born in Korea and immigrated to the U.S. in 1980. As the executive director of the only national organization solely dedicated to improving the overall health and well-being of Asian women and girls, Ms. Chung has become a national leader in the women's health arena. Ms. Chung co-founded the Women of Color Coalition for Reproductive Health Rights (WOCCRHR), a national coalition representing women of color health organizations. In the international arena, Ms. Chung convened the first U.S. Women of Color Delegation to the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) in Cairo in 1994, and led the group again in 1995 to the Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing, China.

Mai Cong, MFCC

Mai Cong is the founder and chief executive officer of the Vietnamese Community of Orange County, Inc. (VNCOC). She is the founder of VNCOC's Senior Program, which currently has 5,000 registered members. Ms. Cong was previously Service Chief, Pacific Asian Service, in the Adult Mental Health Services of Orange County Health Care Agency. An active advocate in the Southeast Asian community, she has received approximately 40 awards and commendations from local and national organizations, including the "Woman of Distinction" award from Soroptimist International in March 1996 and the Civil Rights Leadership Award from the California Association of Civil Rights Organizations in October of 1994.

Julianna S. Gonen, PhD

Julianna S. Gonen is a research associate with the Jacobs Institute for Women's Health in Washington, D.C. Dr. Gonen is currently working on a two-year exploration of the impact of managed care on health care services for women. Prior to joining the Institute, Dr. Gonen was senior research associate in the medical affairs department at the American Association of Health Plans and the director of industry research at the American Managed Care and Review Association.

Dennis Hayashi, JD

Dennis Hayashi was appointed Director of the Office of Civil Rights (OCR) by HHS Secretary Donna E. Shalala in 1993. As Director of OCR, Ms. Hayashi is responsible for ensuring that programs receiving funds from the Department of Health and Human Services are in compliance with all civil rights laws. Mr. Hayashi is a distinguished attorney whose career has been devoted to fighting for civil rights and equality. From 1979 to 1991, he was an attorney for the Asian Law Caucus, Inc. litigating major impact precedent-setting cases and advocating the passage and enforcement of various civil rights laws. Mr. Hayashi has worked against hate crimes and anti-Asian violence, co-founding the National Network Against Anti-Asian Violence. As an attorney, he has also represented Fred Korematsu in his effort to overturn his World War II conviction for opposing internment of Japanese Americans.

The Honorable Mike Honda

The Honorable Mike Honda was overwhelmingly elected to the California State Assembly in 1996 to become only the second Asian American serve in over 16 years. He initiated his first term in office by introducing legislation that encourages language translation services in domestic violence shelters, establishes teacher training on domestic violence, citizenship assistance centers, and a welfare to work pilot program. Prior to serving in the State Assembly, Mike served on the Santa Clara County Board of Supervisors, where he was a strong advocate for women's health: co-sponsoring a successful grant application for the award of $440,000 for the county's Breast Cancer Early Detection Project; increasing funding for battered women's shelters in Santa Clara County; and securing funding which prevented the closure of the county's Perinatal Mother's Outreach Program. In addition, Mr. Honda sponsored the county's first Women's Health Conference on November 1, 1995, which focused on health promotion and access to health care for women in their post-reproductive years.

She is currently the executive director of the Korean American Family Service Center, a small non-profit counseling center in New York City which provides domestic violence intervention services to the Korean American community in the greater New York City metropolitan area. Prior to joining KAFSC, she studied Buddhism in Thailand for one year and worked as the director of volunteer services for Hope House, Inc., a mainstream domestic violence shelter for battered women and children in Kansas City, Missouri.

Commissioner Yvonne Lee

For two decades, Yvonne Y. Lee has been active in civil rights issues, advocating for the needs of the indigent, the elderly and immigrant communities. In November 1995, Ms. Lee was appointed by President Clinton to serve a six year term on the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. Ms. Lee began her public service career in 1978 with Self-Help for the Elderly, a multi-service agency serving seniors in the San Francisco Bay Area, where she was program director for 10 years. Ms. Lee was also executive director of the Chinese American Citizens Alliance for four years, co-founded the Coalition of Asian Pacific Americans for Fair Reapportionment, and is a co-founding member of the National Network Against Anti-Asian violence. Ms. Lee developed the concept and co-produced "Separate Lives, Broken Dreams", a video documentary commemorating the 50th anniversary of the repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Act, which won a Northern California Emmy for best documentary.

Sunita Mehta

Sunita Mehta works as Grants Manager at The Sister Fund, a feminist foundation in New York City. She has worked for the Domestic Violence Prevention Program at Victim Services Agency, International Women's Tribune Centre, and The Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, the leading women-owned abortion provider and health clinic in the Midwest. Ms. Mehta is a board member at Sakhi for South Asian Women and the Third Wave Fund, a foundation devoted to the issues of young women aged 15-30.

Janice Mirikitani

Janice Mirikitani is renowned for her vivid poetry and prose. Ms. Mirikitani's work presents stunning images of contemporary urban life, and confronts the dangers of passivity through her poems against the internment experience which silenced her own family and many Nisei (second-generation Japanese Americans) for four decades. She began working at Glide Memorial Church in 1965, and rose to her present position as President of the Glide Foundation and Executive Director of Programs. Ms. Mirikitani has supported programs on women's health, support and recovery, and children, youth, and families. She has helped create and co-edit several anthologies, specifically to empower writers of color and women, and has been published in numerous textbooks, journals, anthologies, magazines, and articles.

Holly J. Mitchell

Holly Mitchell is the executive director for the California Black Women's Health Project where she leads the effort to help educate and mobilize Black women to take control and become active participants in their health. Previously, Ms. Mitchell served as the project director for the California Women's Health Project, a program of the California Elected Women's Association for Education and Research (CEWAER), where she developed a comprehensive public policy agenda aimed at improving the health status of California women. She is a former Coro Foundation fellow, field deputy to Senator Diane Watson and senior consultant to the Senate Committee on Health and Human Services. Ms. Mitchell has received several honors including a feature in Ebony Magazine as one of America's "50 Future Leaders."

Phyllis Murakawa

Phyllis Murakawa is president of the Asian Pacific Women's Center, a transitional housing program for victims of domestic violence. Ms. Murakawa is also active with the Japanese American Citizens League and is a fellow in this year's class of the Asian Pacific American Women's Leadership Institute. She is principal of Syner-Chi International, a marketing/public relations firm specializing in producing easy-listening music.

Alexander D. Nakatani, MSW

Alexander Nakatani is a retired clinical social worker, who worked for the Veterans Administration in Los Angeles and Palo Alto for four years before becoming the chief of psychiatric social work in Palo Alto, and program director in the field office in San Jose. Currently, he is co-founder and consultant of the Guy T. Nakatani Life Management Program, conducting workshops and presentations relative to the multiple and complex issues surrounding the premature deaths of his three sons, Glen, Greg and Guy Nakatani.

Sylvia Robledo

Sylvia Robledo is the director of public affairs and government relations for the California Hospital Medical Center, a private, non-profit, acute care hospital serving downtown Los Angeles and the Central City since 1887. Ms. Robledo works with government officials and the public in providing responsive healthcare. Ms. Robledo has more than 15 years of experience working in the public and private sector. She has worked with elected officials, government agencies, law enforcement, educators and health professionals on issues ranging from literacy programs and graffiti clean-up to changing public policy and shaping legislation. Her prior professional experience includes serving as a public affairs officer for a national award winning anti-vandalism outreach program.

Congresswoman Lucille Roybal-Allard

The first Mexican-American woman in Congress, Lucille Roybal-Allard was elected by California's 33rd Congressional District in 1992 and won re-election in 1994 and 1996. On January 8, 1997, the California Democratic Congressional Delegation elected Congresswoman Roybal-Allard as Chair. The Congresswoman is the first woman and Latina to head the 29-member Delegation. Congresswoman Roybal-Allard serves on two major committees in the 105th Congress- the House Committee on the Budget, and the House Committee on Banking & Financial Services. The California National Organization for Women named Roybal-Allard "Legislator of the Year" for her contributions on women's, domestic violence, and sexual assault issues. Ms. Roybal-Allard's advocacy has also earned her recognition from the Los Angeles Women's Legislative Coalition, the Asian Business Coalition, the Garment Worker's Justice Center, and the Asian Pacific American Labor Association.

Susan Matsuko Shinagawa

Susan Shinagawa is a breast cancer survivor who will celebrate her sixth year of "thrivership" in October of 1997. Ms. Shinagawa is NAWHO's Breast Cancer Project Co-Trainer, and has been an active advocate for cancer survivors, with a primary focus on breast cancer outreach, education and health care services access/models of care for minority and low-income populations. She chairs the California Department of Health Services (CDHS) Breast Cancer Early Detection Program API Advisory Committee, and serves as the API cancer survivor representative member and chair of the Cancer Survivorship Task Force of the Intercultural Cancer Council. Ms. Shinagawa is on the Board of Directors of the Breast Cancer Fund, a national breast cancer foundation. She is an American Cancer Society-certified Breast Health Facilitator and a member of the UCSD Thrivers' Network.

The Honorable Hilda Solis

The Honorable Hilda Solis made history when she was elected to the California State Senate in 1994, becoming the first Latina ever to serve in that legislative body. Solis serves as chair of the Senate Industrial Relations Committee and is a member of the Finance, Investment, and International Trade; Health and Human Services; Judiciary; Natural Resources; and the Public Employment and Retirement Committees. Previously, Ms. Solis served two years in the State Assembly. Prior to her election to the California State Legislature, Ms. Solis served as editor-in-chief for the White House Office of Hispanic Affairs during the Carter Administration in 1980. She also served as a management analyst for the U.S. Office of Management and Budget in Washington, D.C.

Katherine Spillar

Kathy Spillar is the National Coordinator of the Feminist Majority Foundation, a national organization working for women's equality, empowerment, and non-violence. As one of its founders, Ms. Spillar has been a driving force in executing the Feminist Majority Foundation's diverse programs securing women's rights since its inception in 1987. In her capacity as National Coordinator, Spillar oversees the activities of the newly-launched National Center for Women and Policing. The National Center is working to increase the numbers of women in the ranks of law enforcement across the country as a strategy for reducing police brutality and improving police response to crimes of violence against women. Spillar led the Feminist Majority's initiative to gender-balance the Los Angeles Police Department from 1991-1994, and served as co-chair of the Women's Advisory Council to the Los Angeles Police Commission from 1992-1993. Prior to her tenure at the Feminist Majority Foundation, Spillar served four terms as President of the Los Angeles Chapter of the National Organization for Women, and led the organizing of the largest West Coast march in the history of the women's rights movement for keeping abortion safe and legal in 1986.

The Honorable Velma R. Veloria

The Honorable Velma R. Veloria is a longtime human rights activist serving her third term in the Washington State House of Representatives. She is the current ranking minority member on the House Trade and Economic Development Committee and is also a member of the House Education Committee. She trains volunteers for the American Cancer Society in order to serve Cantonese- and Mandarin-speaking patients with cancer. Evaon is a committee member of the Intercultural Cancer Council, a national advocacy organization for improving the cancer mortality rate of underserved populations. Ms. Wong-Kim is currently a PhD student in the School of Social Welfare at the University of California, Berkeley.

Regional Caucuses - NAWHO's National Leadership Program

NAWHO's NATIONAL ASIAN WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP PROGRAM

Through the 2nd Biennial Conference, NAWHO is building its constituency base and a national Asian women's leadership network. During the conference, Asian women and girls will be provided leaderships skills, training and resources, and will be given the opportunity to meet with others working on Asian women's issues in their regions of the country, through regional caucuses. Regional Caucuses are opportunity for participants to grasp the resources that exist in the women around them, and to use the momentum from this conference to organize within their own communities, in partnership with NAWHO. The Caucuses will provide a means to network with other women from their area, identify and prioritize issues that are relevant to their communities, and develop action plans.

Each caucus will have a regional leader, who will facilitate the sessions and report back to the full conference participants on their region's action plan. The regional caucus leaders and conference participants will become the basis of NAWHO's National Asian Women's Leadership Program, and will continue the work begun at the conference in their local communities. The National Asian Women's Leadership Program is a multi-year advocacy training and skills-building program for Asian women's health leaders. Seventeen regions of the country have been determined as priority areas. NAWHO is proud to introduce the following selected regional leaders.

NAWHO REGIONAL CAUCUS COORDINATOR:

Christina Ree

As NAWHO's Regional Caucus Coordinator, Ms. Christina Ree has helped to develop the Regional Caucus Program, by establishing contacts with Asian women leaders throughout the country, and coordinating communication between Regional Caucus Chairs and NAWHO. Ms. Ree is also Project Coordinator at Association of Asian Pacific Community Health Organizations (AAPCHO), a national association of Asian and Pacific Islander community health clinics. At AAPCHO, she coordinates the Asian Pacific Partners for Empowerment and Leadership (APPEAL) project, a national program dedicated to making Asian and Pacific Islander communities tobacco-free through network development, capacity-building, education, advocacy and leadership development.

REGIONAL CAUCUS LEADERS:

Nancy H. Au

Nancy H. Au is the President/Chief Executive Director of the WRAP Agency, a private nonprofit multicultural human services agency specializing in serving the Asian and Pacific Islander children, youth and families on the westside of Los Angeles County. Ms. Au is the immediate past president of Asian Pacific Planning Council (APPCON) of Los Angeles. Ms. Au serves as a steering committee member of the Los Angeles County Medi-Cal Mental Health Managed Care Planning Committee, and is a member of the Regional Community Advisory Conference for L.A. Care Health Plan.

Los Angeles

Alicia De Leon-Torres

Alicia De Leon-Torres is the Program Director for the Union of Pan Asian Communities' Alcohol and Drug Prevention Program, the Office of Child Abuse Prevention - After School Program, Teens Speak: A Forum for the Filipino Youth, and the Filipino Teen Suicide Prevention Program. Jocelyn C. Pan

Jocelyn C. Pan, MPH received her MPH from the Boston University School of Public Health in 1995 and has worked in Boston's Asian community, first as a volunteer and currently as full-time staff at South Cove Community Health Center in Chinatown. As Programs Coordinator at South Cove's Family Life Center, Ms. Pan hopes to develop activities that integrate the young and the old, across generations and age groups. Her involvement with the youth program at South Cove has also made clear the need for programs for Asian adolescents, particularly girls, that will instill self-confidence and a sense of empowerment.

Bay Area

Thi Kim Pham

Thi Kim Pham is the Program Director at Bay Area Region Tobacco Education Resource (BARTER), a tobacco control partnership of seven Bay Area counties and the City of Berkeley. Ms. Pham's previous work as Project Coordinator for Asian Communities Against Tobacco focused on developing merchant education programs on preventing tobacco sales to minors, conducting purchase surveys, and developing tobacco education and control materials for the Chinese, Korean, and Laotian communities of Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda. Ms. Pham is also working with Asian communities to find sponsorship alternatives to tobacco advertising for Asian events and to counter tobacco dumping practices outside the United States.

Clarita Santos

Clarita Santos, MPH received her MPH in Health Policy and Administration from the University of Illinois at Chicago School of Public Health. She works as an HIV/AIDS Case Manager at Asian American AIDS Services and serves as an advocate for addressing the HIV/AIDS needs of Asian and Pacific Islander communities. Ms. Santos is both a member of the Chicago and Cook County HIV Services Planning Council and the Leadership Center for Asian Pacific Americans.

Chicago

Merina Sapolu
